Presented by the Department of Law and Human Rights

Overview

Our products and services in law will empower you with the essential tools, skills and knowledge to meet a constantly evolving legal and economic system, while facing the effects of the Fourth Industrial Revolution heads-on. In the immediate future, we might need to reconsider what privacy really means, how predictive policing policies might influence our everyday activities and even how employment relationships might shift. Our courses offer an introduction to the principles and practices of the legal system, covering constitutional, criminal, civil and international law.
